Bright Coffee Shop

“Crafted Energy for Every Day”

By Ms Phindile Radebe

Agenda

Introduction

Key Objectives

Scope of Analysis

Recommendations

Conclusion

Introduction

The Bright Coffee Shop Sales dataset offers a clear view of daily sales activity, highlighting key trends in revenue, product performance, and customer behavior. In line with the new CEO's strategic focus on growth and optimization, this analysis uses historical data to identify performance trends and growth opportunities, enabling informed, data-driven executive decision-making.

Key Objectives

Evaluate overall sales performance and revenue trends over time.

Identify top-performing and underperforming products.

Assess customer purchasing patterns and peak sales periods.

Highlight opportunities to increase revenue and improve product mix.

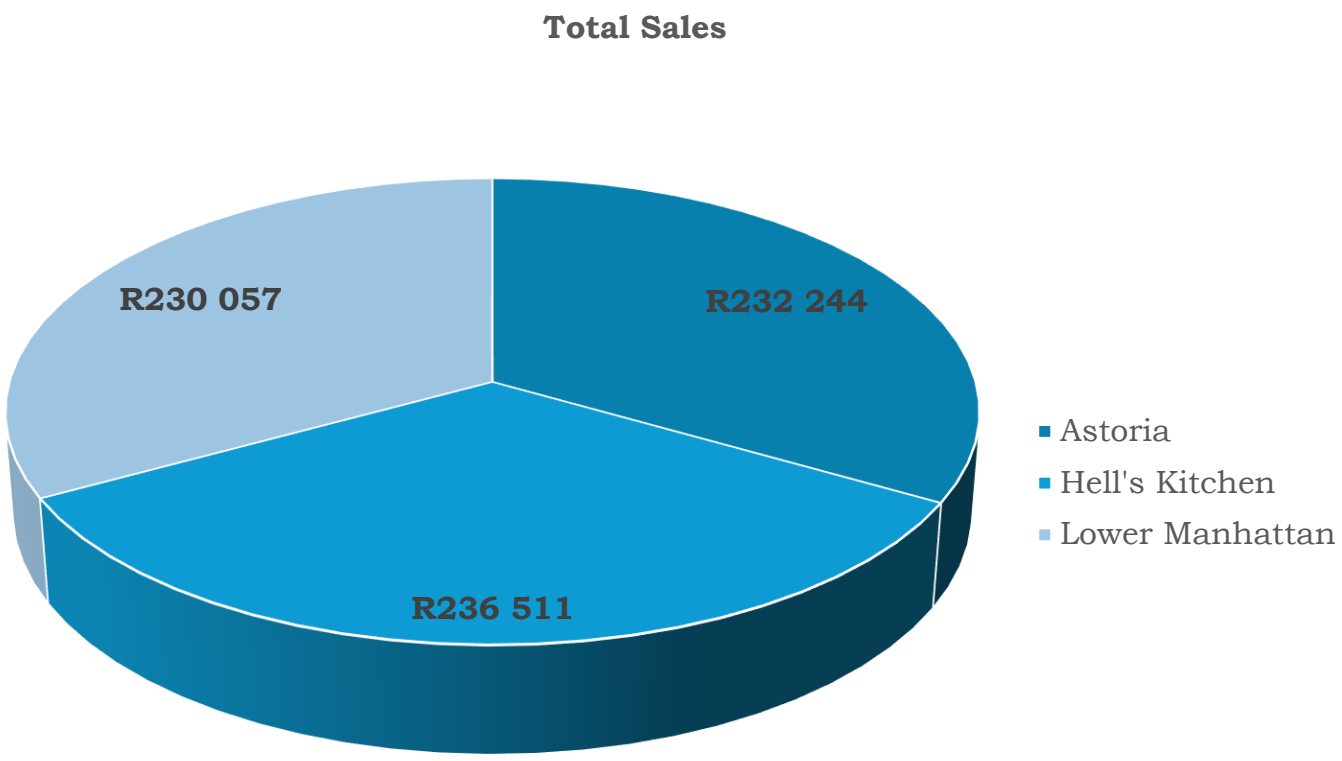
Scope of Analysis

Analysis is based on historical daily transaction data from the Bright Coffee Shop

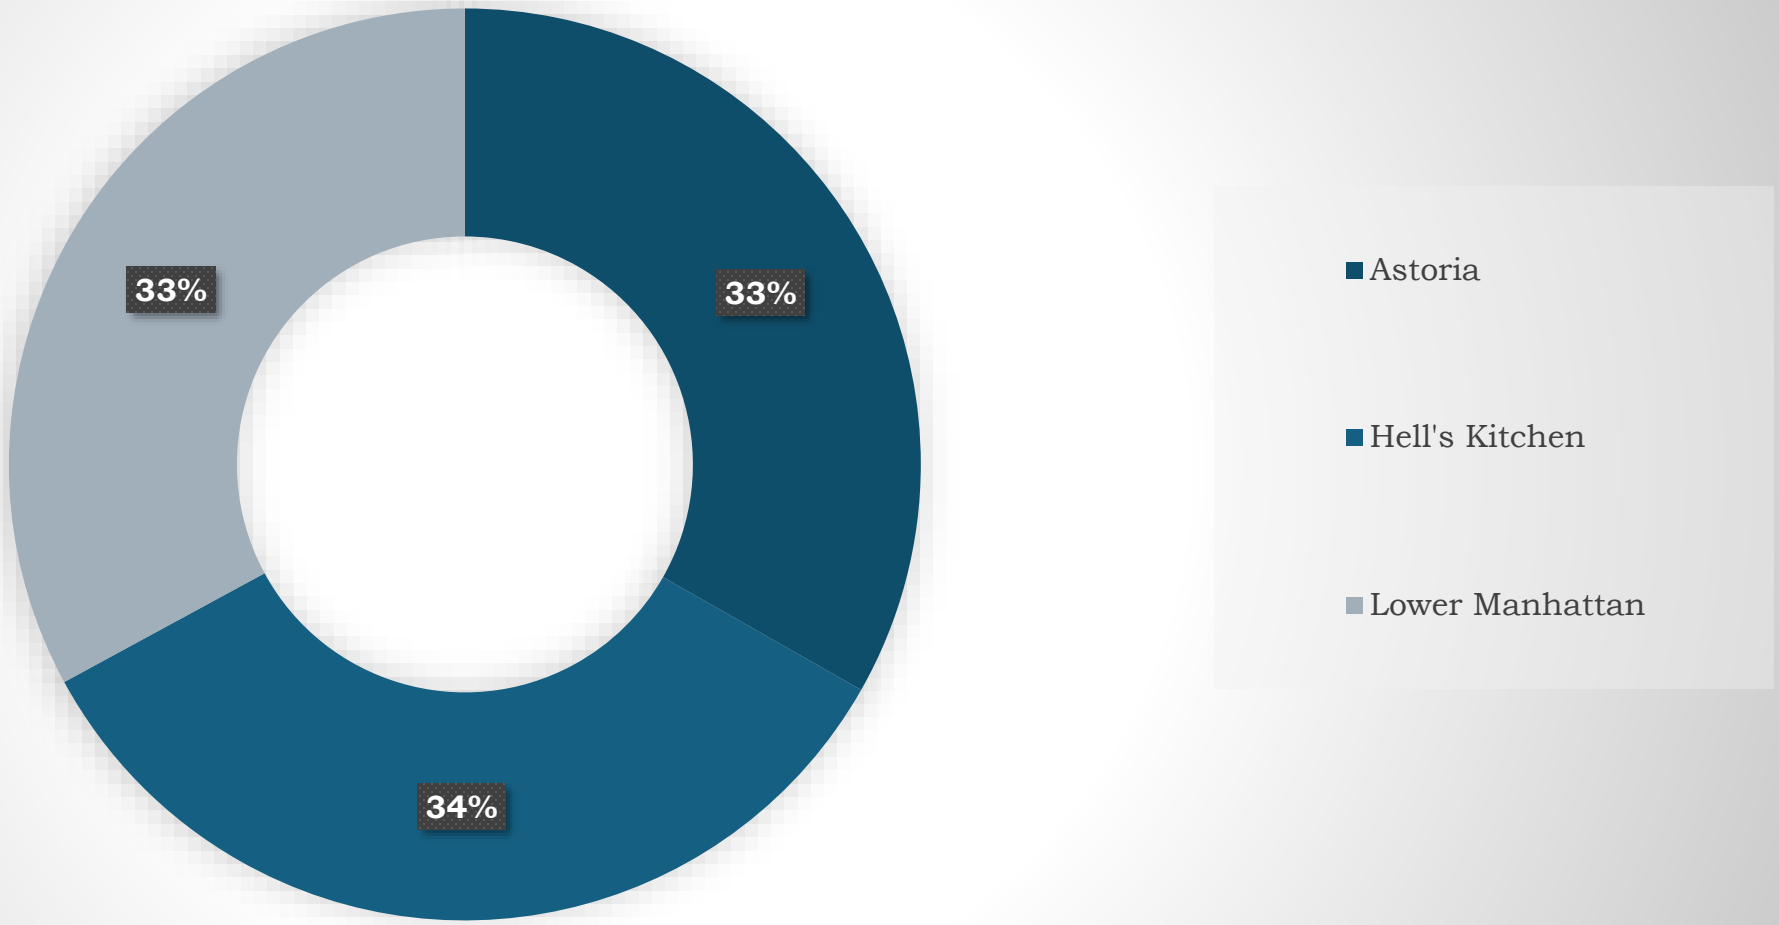
Focus areas include revenue, product categories, sales volume, and trends

Findings are intended to support strategic planning and executive decision-making

Revenue Breakdown by Location



% Revenue Breakdown by Location



Revenue Breakdown by Location

- Hell's Kitchen: Highest revenue contributor: R236,511
  Strong performer and potential benchmark store
- Astoria: Close second with revenue of R232,244
  Demonstrates stable and reliable sales performance
- Lower Manhattan Lowest revenue at R230,057
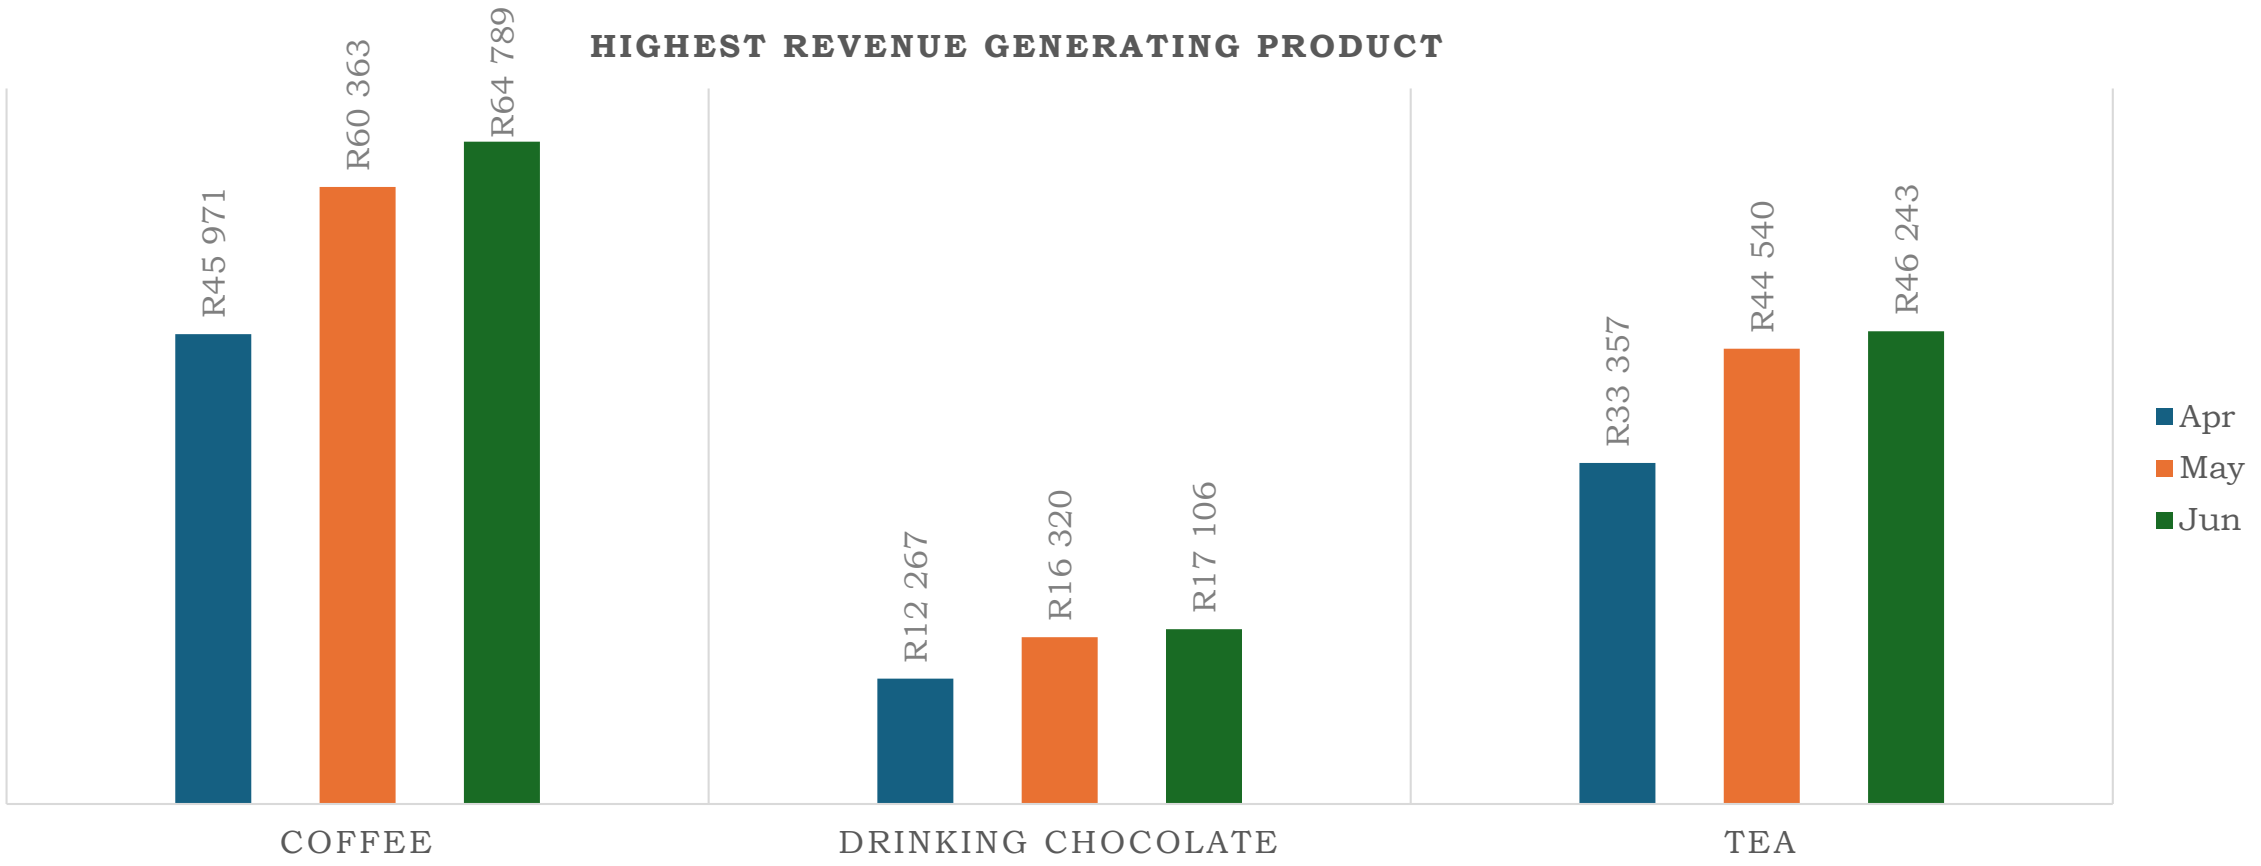
  Performance gap is minimal, indicating growth potential

Product Category Insight



Product Category Insight

Coffee

- April: R45,971
- May: R60,363
- June: R64,789
- Coffee demonstrates strong and accelerating growth, making it the primary revenue driver.
- The steady increase suggests high customer demand and strong product-market fit.

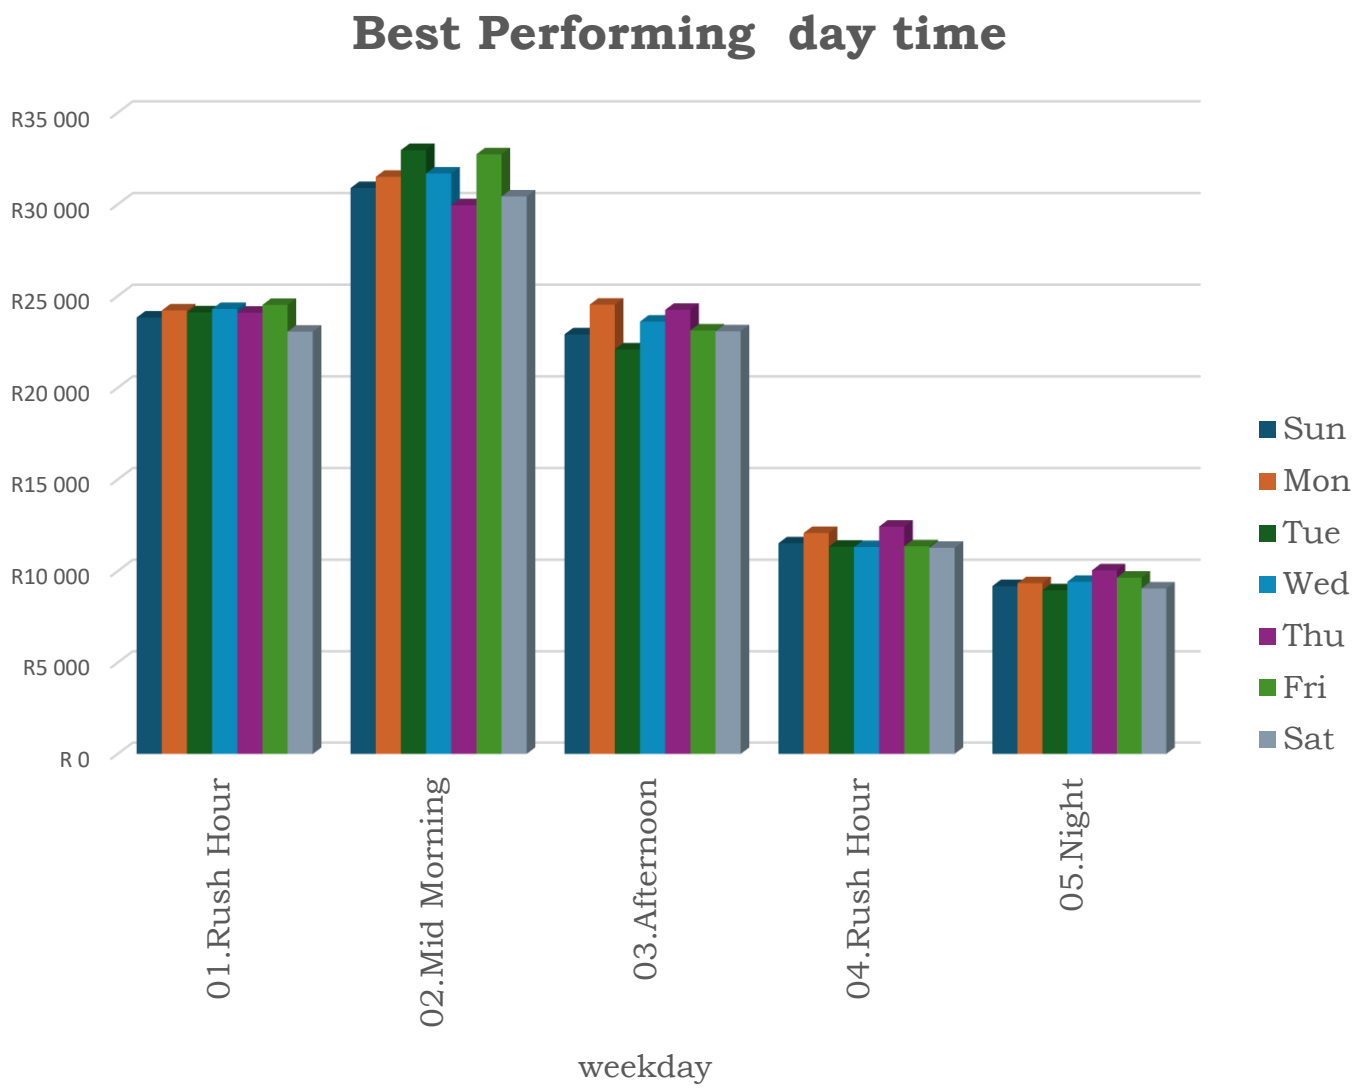
Tea

- April: R33,357
- May: R44,540
- June: R46,243
- Tea shows consistent growth, with a significant jump from April to May.
- This indicates an opportunity to further expand or promote tea offerings.

Drinking Chocolate

- April: R12,267
- May: R16,320
- June: R17,106
- Although it generates the lowest revenue, Drinking Chocolate shows gradual growth.
- The trend suggests a niche but stable customer base.

Best Performing Day Time



Overall Insights

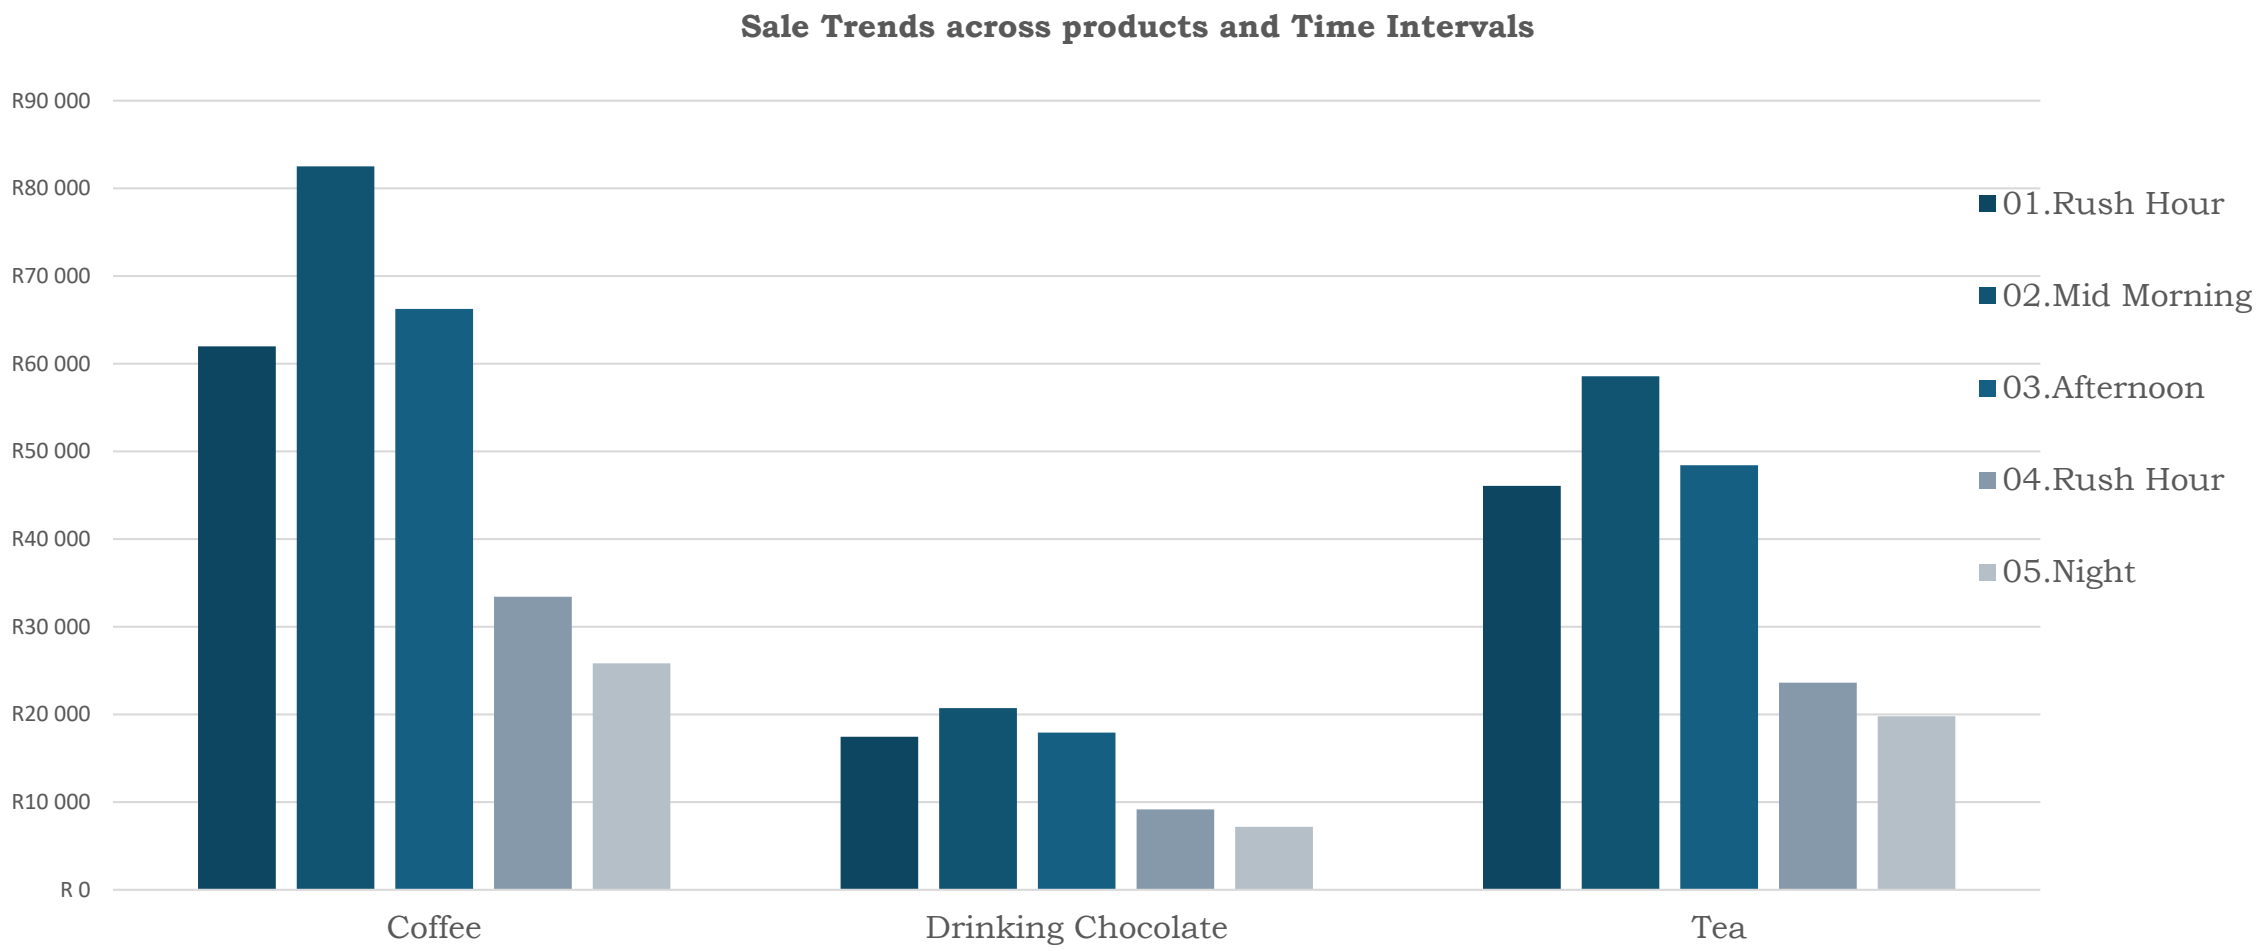
Mid-Morning is the highest revenue-generating time period across all days.

Early Rush Hour and Afternoon also contribute significantly to revenue.

Evening Rush Hour and Night generate the lowest revenue consistently.

Revenue patterns remain consistent across weekdays, indicating predictable customer behavior.

Sales Trends Across Product and Time intervals



Sales Trends Across Product and time Intervals

Key Insights

- Mid-Morning is the strongest revenue-generating time interval across all product categories.
- Coffee consistently generates the highest revenue, followed by Tea, with Drinking Chocolate performing the lowest.
- Revenue generally declines as the day progresses, with Night being the weakest performing period.
- The sales pattern is consistent across products, indicating predictable customer behavior by time of day.

Recommendations

These are recommendations for Bright Coffee Shop

- Focus resources on Coffee and Tea during mid-morning and afternoon periods, where sales performance and customer demand are strongest
- Identify and replicate best practices from top-performing store locations, particularly in staffing, product availability, and customer engagement
- Strategically optimize low-performing time intervals, such as evenings and nights, through targeted promotions or cost-efficient operating models
- Apply a data-driven approach to balance revenue growth with operational efficiency
- Support sustainable long-term performance improvement across all Bright Coffee Shop locations

Conclusion

In conclusion, the analysis highlights clear opportunities for Bright Coffee Shop to grow revenue by focusing on high-performing products and peak trading periods. By leveraging data-driven insights to optimize operations, enhance product performance, and replicate best practices across stores, the business is well-positioned to achieve sustainable growth and long-term success.